ACETYLENE LIGHT & AGENCY CO., LTD.
J. B. SEARLE, Treasurer.

The above advertisement is misleading in view of the fact that I am a large stockholder as well as a director of The Acetylene Light & Agency Co., Ltd. It is true, however, in our respect. I have resigned as manager, for the reason that my ideas as to how the business should be conducted were not in accord with the views of the controlling interest. I don't like their methods and they don't like my management, so I quit. "Verbum sap."

To those who are familiar with my methods of conducting business I desire to announce that I have established myself at 757 Beretania street, telephone 2770, where I shall attend to the sale and installation of Solar water heaters, which have given universal satisfaction. I shall also give my personal attention to the ready-made house business. I shall also handle other lines of interest to the public, notice of which will be given from time to time. Particular attention is called at this time to the demonstrations which will be given of recent developments in gas appliances. I shall always be glad to see my customers at my office or will call in person in response to telephone request.

Always at your service,

WORLD-WIDE LOSS OF SYMPATHY IS JAPAN'S PRICE OF VICTORY

Kawakami Doubts If Concessions Obtained are Worth General Alienation

K. H. Kawakami, a well-known Japanese student residing in San Francisco, the author of "Japanese in America," doubts whether the loss of Chinese, American and European sympathy and the world-wide distrust of Japan engendered by Japan's recent demands on China, are not too high a price to pay for the concessions obtained.

Writing in the English section of a Japanese publication of San Francisco, Kawakami says:
The China-Japanese protocols recently concluded at Peking have been ratified by the Mikado and President Yuan Shih-Kai and made public simultaneously at the capitals of Japan and China.

These instruments accord Japan distinct material advantage. They will provide a potent impetus to Japanese enterprise and commerce in China. These advantages, however, have not been gained by Japan without paying dearly for them. The price she has paid and is still paying cannot be calculated in terms of dollars and cents, because it is a price paid in the shape of a moral loss.

I am not speaking of the great cost which Japan had to bear in life and gold in order to reduce the German stronghold of Kiaochow. Neither am I speaking of the enormous sacrifice she made in combating the Russian encroachment upon China in the historic days of Viceroy Alexieff.

I am thinking of the loss of sympathy which Japan has suffered not only in China but in Europe and America. By presenting the apparently sweeping demand upon China the Mikado's empire has provoked the resentment of the Chinese people and alienated the sympathy which America and Europe have entertained towards her. This, to me, is the greatest loss Japan has suffered in order to exact the new protocols from China.

And this moral loss will not remain a moral loss, but will affect Japan's pocket as she settles down to the normal pursuit of commerce and trade in China. For this price what has Japan obtained?

She did not get the German territory of Kiaochow, for she is going to restore it to China. She did not secure for her subjects the privilege of erecting churches. She virtually withdrew group No. 5 of the original demands concerning the employment of Japanese advisors, the purchase of arms and munitions from Japan, the granting of railway concessions in the Yangtze region, the Japanese ownership of land for the purpose of erecting schools and hospitals, and the propagation of religion by Japanese in China. Japan also withdrew the proposal that in certain cities a joint China-Japanese police service be established.

What advantage, then, has Japan secured for the price she has paid? First, with regard to Manchuria her newly acquired advantage consists of these provisions: (1) Japanese shall be permitted to lease or buy land and erect buildings for commercial, industrial and agricultural purposes. (2) They shall enjoy liberty to enter, travel or reside in South Manchuria and to conduct business of all kinds. (3) They shall be governed by Chinese police laws and regulations approved by the Japanese consul, and shall pay to the Chinese authorities taxes approved by the Japanese consul.

Secondly, in Eastern Mongolia Japan has obtained the following privileges: (1) China shall permit joint enterprise of Japanese and Chinese in agriculture and allied industries. (2) In case China contemplates contracting railway loans, or loans to be secured by taxes she shall first consult Japan. (3) China shall open a number of new places to international trade.

Thirdly, with regard to Hanyeh-ping Company in which Japanese capitalists have invested $20,000,000, the following agreement is made: (1) China shall approve the arrangement that may be made in the future between the company and the Japanese investors. (2) China shall not confiscate its property. (3) China shall not nationalize the undertaking without the consent of the Japanese investors. (4) China shall not permit the company to contract any foreign loan other than Japanese.

Fourthly, in Fukien Province, close to the Japanese territory of Formosa, China engages not to grant any foreign power the right to build shipyard, coaling or repair station, or other military establishment on or along its coast. Nor shall China permit any such establishment to be built with foreign capital.

This is the sum and substance of the new privileges which Japan has secured from China. Whether they are worth the price it is not easy to say. Yet the Japanese seem to be sanguine of their ability to regain the confidence of the Chinese and to establish a friendly relationship between the two nations upon a firmer foundation. Compared with what the aggressors of Europe have done to China since the days of the opium war, they argue, the Japanese terms accepted by China are both moderate and reasonable. By adopting a policy of magnanimity calculated to assist in the establishment of an efficient stable government for China, the Japanese hope to convince the Chinese people that the new protocols are concluded not for the mere purpose of securing for Japan a "place in the sun," but for the mutual benefit of the two nations.

President Yuan Shih-Kai is the Diaz of China. He is giving for China what President Diaz did for Mexico. In order to retain his position and his government Yuan Shih-Kai has been borrowing foreign capital right and left. He is ready to grant any concession to any foreigner if he can only get money to keep the wheels of his administration running. Dire outcome of this reckless policy is apparent. President Wilson indicated his disapproval of this policy by a negative measure—by obliging the withdrawal of American bankers from the group of foreign capitalists interested in investing in China. Japan, whose destiny is inseparably interwoven with that of China, could not afford to follow Mr. Wilson's serene policy of watchful waiting, and adopted a positive policy as indicated in the recent demands upon China.

In seeking a place in the sun, Japan is not trying to satisfy lust for territory. What she wants abroad is the freedom of residence, travel, labor, trade and enterprise. We have heard so much of Germany's place in the sun. And yet are not the Germans absolutely free to emigrate to all countries? Why should they clamor for a place in the sun? How totally different Japan's place in the sun from that of Germany! The Japanese are denied admission to all countries which seem to offer the greatest opportunity for the betterment of their lot. Around such countries the Caucasian races have long since established high walls to the exclusion of all other races. It would be the greatest marvel of history if the Japanese could be made to remain contented in the narrow precincts of their archipelago.

THE HUMOR OF THE IRISH.

In her article on "Customs of an Irish County" in Harper's Magazine for June, Maude Radford Warren gives some delightful examples of the native Irish humor. A group of peasants are engaged in general conversation:
"I'd not be after calling him a liar, exactly," says one. "Sure, he was complimenting Mr. Catter on the speech he made and says Mr. Carey, 'Tell me, then, Tim, what part of it did you like best?'" And says he bold Tim, "Sure, it wasn't a particular part, so to speak, but your perseverance, the way you went over it and over it."

"After the laughter subsides, the same man continues: 'That one, if he was courting, would be many a knot with his tongue he couldn't untie with his teeth, and if he had to follow the track of his own words, it's a grand hunt he'd give himself. I'm thinking 'tis a fine thing for his wife he's single.'"
"Sure," answers a former speaker, "I'm thinking marriage is on his mind. For says I to him, thinking I'd incense him into a little law, him being so above himself with this new office, says I to him, 'Tim, what is the penalty for bigamy?' and he says back to me, 'Two mothers-in-law.'"
